2007 Monroe County
Employee of the Year
Brandon Gill

Brandon began his employment with the County in 2005 as a Systems Analyst with the Technical Services Division. Brandon is one of the finest people I have ever had the pleasure to work with. Brandon's vast technical skill set is constantly being besieged in all directions; yet, he does his job with a positive attitude. He is always very helpful and courteous no matter the pressure he is currently under. His positive attitude is contagious and he adds warmth and support to any high pressure environment. Brandon's work ethic is unsurpassed. He will stick with any project (no matter how tedious or grueling) until the bitter end. When dealing with the most complex of problems, he will coordinate with others flawlessly- Brandon is a true team player. Technical Services positions involve maintaining a vast knowledge of both software and hardware and how they interrelate on an enterprise network. The tech must also constantly strive to learn new and emerging technologies. Brandon easily adapts to any technologies that come his way. He is a true technological erudite who understands both software and hardware-his value to our department is beyond measure.

Brandon is truly an asset to Technical Services and Monroe County and we are extremely proud to recognize him as the 2007 Monroe County Employee of the year.
